Dear Ms. Levin:

Thank you for your May 16, 2016 letter regarding your concerns about the current processing times for U visa petitions. Since its inception, the U nonimmigrant program has strived to meet the goals of strengthening the ability of law enforcement to investigate and prosecute qualifying crimes, and protecting victims of crimes who have suffered substantial mental or physical abuse. U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) has met the 10,000 annual U visa cap every fiscal year (FY) since 2010. From 2014-2016, USCIS met the cap within the first few months of each fiscal year. We understand you and your clients' frustrations as well as the hardships that the statutory cap may cause. Recognizing the vulnerability of this population of petitioners, USCIS implemented the waiting list process in FY 2010 to allow eligible petitioners to receive deferred action and employment authorization while they wait for a visa number to become available.

Over the past several years, USCIS has experienced a steady increase in the number of U visa petitions received, which has contributed to an increase in the overall processing time. We assure you that USCIS remains committed to the timely review and adjudication of U nonimmigrant petitions. USCIS strives to balance newly filed petitions, waiting list adjudications, and pending principal and derivative U nonimmigrant status adjudications in a manner that will best serve the overall program.

The number of U nonimmigrant status petitions received by USCIS has increased significantly over the past several years from about 11,000 in FY 2009 to more than 52,000 in FY 2015. In December 2015, after USCIS reached the FY 2016 statutory cap, we quickly shifted resources at the Vermont Service Center (VSC) to adjudicate petitions for derivatives of those principal petitioners who had just been granted U nonimmigrant status. Once the VSC adjudicated the petitions for derivatives, it then focused on addressing backlogs within the U nonimmigrant status program, including petitions for derivatives who filed after the principal received U nonimmigrant status in a prior fiscal year. USCIS continues to prioritize petitions by receipt date. Although it may appear that there has been a delay in the return to adjudicating incoming petitions that are pending waiting list consideration, USCIS continues to review petitions on a “first-in, first-out” basis. In addition, USCIS receives and responds to the more than 6,600 customer service inquiries received each month.

USCIS is exploring many strategies to address current processing times. In July 2016, the Nebraska Service Center (NSC) joined the VSC in processing Form I-918, Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status. Sharing this workload between service centers will provide flexibility as USCIS works toward improving processing times, efficiency, and customer service to this vulnerable population. USCIS is implementing the transition in phases which will allow the NSC to develop the necessary expertise with support and guidance from the VSC, ensuring continuity of adjudication. The NSC was chosen to partner with the VSC in sharing the U nonimmigrant workload for a number of reasons, including its extensive background with other humanitarian programs. Sharing the U nonimmigrant petition workload between the service centers has the potential to improve the U nonimmigrant petition process for thousands of petitioners and their family members.

Thank you again for your letter and interest in this important issue. Please share this information with the organizations that co-signed your letter.

Sincerely,

RE: Significant Delays in adjudicating petitions for U Nonimmigrant Status

Dear Director Rodríguez:

We, the 307 undersigned organizations that work with or otherwise support immigrant survivors of sexual and gender-based violence, respectfully wish to bring to your attention the increasing delays in adjudicating petitions for U nonimmigrant status. It is taking at least two years for USCIS to process Form I-918 petitions for an initial adjudication to the waitlist, and it appears likely that these delays will only worsen in the near future.

On April 28, 2016, USCIS sent a letter to stakeholders acknowledging that some cases are taking longer to complete than usual and apologized for the inconvenience. To address this problem, USCIS indicated that it planned on reallocating the workload among different service centers in order to maximize resources and improve case processing times. If this reallocation of resources involves assigning VAWA, U or T cases to another service center, such a reallocation would be an inappropriate and unworkable solution in this particular instance. Adjudicators in the Humanitarian Division at the Vermont Service Center (VSC) have specialized training which is critical to their ability to fairly and efficiently review and adjudicate these applications. Given the importance of training of U adjudicators (and indeed the on-going need for this specialized training), the reallocation of resources to different service centers will not solve the delays in the U visa program.

VSC is currently adjudicating U nonimmigrant petitions that were filed on or before May 7, 2014, which means that it takes at least two years for a case to be initially adjudicated and placed on the U visa waitlist. This is a deplorable delay which seriously compromises the safety and well-being of applicants and their families.¹ Equally alarming is the fact that there has been no forward movement at all in adjudicating these applications since April 30, 2015², which is over a year ago. We urge USCIS to support the VSC Humanitarian Unit to increase the pace of adjudications and reduce the growing backlog.

*on July 17, 2015 the processing time fluctuated briefly

The U waitlist and the grant of deferred action was created to provide protections to victims of crime and allow them to obtain protection from removal, as well as eligibility to work lawfully in the United States while they await a U visa. Delays in timely adjudicating these petitions undermines these goals, as illustrated in the following cases:

Lucia* is the victim of domestic violence at the hands of her spouse, with whom she still lives. She feels unable to leave her abuser because without work authorization, a social security number, or a driver’s license, she fears she would be unable to provide for herself and her children. She plans to escape her abusive relationship once she has the resources to support herself and her children. With current processing times, her petition is likely to be pending for another year or so, during which she fears she will be subject to more violence.

* All names have been changed to protect the confidentiality of the victims.

Talia was the victim of rape when she was just a teenager. Her U visa application has been pending for 14 months, and she would desperately like to visit her family abroad who she has not seen since she was attacked. With current processing times and the U visa backlog, it could take years before she is able to see them.

Fatima is the victim of repeated felonious first degree sexual assault as the hands of her grandfather, who was a caregiver to her and her three siblings while her parents worked to support their family. Her household has been ostracized by family members for reporting the rape. Now her father is struggling to support the family without adequate employment authorization, while her mother tries to support Fatima and her siblings' healing process. Her family's applications have been pending for 24 months, essentially stalled along with the processing times. Meanwhile, Fatima and her siblings have diminished family support and believe they may never have work authorization.

It is unacceptable that victims of crimes must wait at least two years for their cases to be initially adjudicated to the waitlist and then several more years before full adjudication. These significant delays leave crime victims vulnerable to removal and leads to economic instability and an inability to rebuild their lives following their victimization. We understand that the VSC Humanitarian Unit is currently focusing on other priorities, such as adjudicating I-918A applications for principals with U status and issuing U visas to those on the waitlist. Those are critical goals as well. Nonetheless, we strongly believe that the adjudication of initial U visa cases must also be a priority, the backlog must be reduced, and that USCIS must provide necessary support to the Humanitarian Division at VSC to enable this to happen as soon as possible.

Thank you for time and attention to this important matter.

RE: Retrasos Significativos en la Adjudicación de Peticiones para la Visa U de No Inmigrantes

Estimado Director Rodríguez:

Nosotros, las 307 organizaciones abajo firmantes que trabajan con o de otra manera apoyan a inmigrantes sobrevivientes de violencia sexual y violencia de género, respetuosamente deseamos traer a su atención los crecientes retrasos en la adjudicación de peticiones de visas U de no inmigrantes. El Servicio de Inmigración y Ciudadanía (USCIS) está necesitando al menos dos años para procesar las peticiones del Formulario I-918 para una adjudicación inicial en la lista de espera, y parece probable que estos retrasos empeoren en el futuro cercano.

El 28 de Abril de 2016, el Servicio de Inmigración y Ciudadanía de E.E.U.U. (USCIS) envió una carta a las partes interesadas reconociendo que algunos casos están tomando más tiempo de lo normal y pidió disculpas por los inconvenientes. Para hacer frente a este problema, el Servicio de Inmigración y Ciudadanía de E.E.U.U. (USCIS) indicó que tiene previsto la reasignación de la carga de trabajo entre los diferentes centros de servicios con el fin de maximizar los recursos y mejorar el tiempo de procesamiento de los casos. Si ésta reasignación de recursos consiste en asignar los casos de VAWA, visas U y T o a otro centro de servicio, esta reasignación sería una solución inadecuada e inviable en este momento en particular. Los adjudicadores en la División Humanitaria del Centro de Servicios de Vermont (VSC) tienen una formación especializada, que es fundamental para su capacidad de revisar y adjudicar estas aplicaciones de manera justa y eficiente. Dada la importancia de la formación de los adjudicadores de las visas U (y de hecho la continua necesidad de esta formación especializada), la reasignación de recursos a diferentes centros de servicios no va a resolver los retrasos en el programa de visas U.

El Servicio de Inmigración y Ciudadanía de E.E.U.U. (USCIS) está actualmente adjudicando peticiones de visas U de no inmigrante que fueron presentadas el día 7 de Mayo de 2014 o anteriores a ese día, lo que significa que se requieren al menos dos años para que un caso sea adjudicado inicialmente y se coloque en la lista de espera de la visa U. Este es un retraso lamentable que compromete seriamente la seguridad y el bienestar de los solicitantes y sus familias. Igualmente alarmante es el hecho de que no haya habido movimiento alguno en la adjudicación de estas aplicaciones desde el 30 de Abril de 2015, es decir por más de un año. Instamos al Servicio de Inmigración y Ciudadanía de E.E.U.U. (USCIS) para que apoye a la Unidad Humanitaria del Centro de Servicios de Vermont (VSC) para aumentar el ritmo de adjudicaciones y reducir los crecientes retrasos.

La lista de espera de la visa U y el estatus de acción diferida fueron creados para proporcionar protección a las víctimas de crímenes y para permitirles obtener protección contra la deportación, así como también darles la posibilidad de trabajar legalmente en los Estados Unidos mientras esperan la visa U. Los retrasos en la adjudicación oportuna de estas peticiones interfiere con estos objetivos, como se ilustra en los siguientes casos:

* Lucía es víctima de violencia doméstica a manos de su esposo con quien aún vive. Ella se siente incapaz de dejar a su agresor, ya que sin la autorización de trabajo, un número de seguro social, o la licencia de conducir, ella teme que no podrá ser capaz de proveer para ella y sus hijos. Ella planea escapar de su relación abusiva una vez que tenga los recursos para mantenerse a sí misma y a sus hijos. Con los tiempos de procesamiento actuales, su petición es probable que esté pendiente por más o menos otro año, durante el cual teme que va a seguir siendo objeto de violencia.

* Todos los nombres han sido cambiados para proteger la confidencialidad de las víctimas.

* Talía fue víctima de violación cuando ella era apenas una adolescente. Su solicitud de visa U está pendiente desde hace 14 meses, y a ella desesperadamente le gustaría visitar a su familia en el extranjero, a quienes no ha visto desde que fue atacada. Con los tiempos actuales de procesamiento y la cantidad de solicitudes de visa U, podría tomar años antes de que ella sea capaz de verlos.

* Fátima es víctima de repetidos asaltos sexuales criminales en primer grado a manos de su abuelo, quien era el guardián de ella y de sus tres hermanas mientras sus padres trabajaban para mantener a su familia. Su hogar ha sido condenado al olvido y rechazado por miembros de la familia por informar de la violación. Ahora su padre está luchando para mantener a la familia sin la adecuada autorización de empleo, mientras que su madre trata de apoyar a Fátima y a sus hermanas en el proceso de curación. Las aplicaciones de su familia han estado pendiente durante 24 meses, esencialmente estancadas por lo largo de los tiempos de procesamiento. Mientras tanto, Fátima y sus hermanas han disminuido el apoyo familiar y creen que nunca podrán tener la autorización de trabajo.

Es inaceptable que las víctimas de crímenes deban esperar un mínimo de dos años para que sus casos sean adjudicados inicialmente a la lista de espera y luego, varios años más para la adjudicación total. Estos retrasos significativos dejan a las víctimas de crímenes vulnerables a la deportación y conduce a la inestabilidad económica y la imposibilidad de reconstruir sus vidas después de su victimización. Nosotros entendemos que la Unidad Humanitaria del Centro de Servicios de Vermont (VSC) está centrándose actualmente en otras prioridades, como la adjudicación de las aplicaciones de I-918A para los beneficiarios principales de las visas U y la emisión de las visas U para los que están en la lista de espera. Esos son objetivos críticos también. No obstante, estamos convencidos de que la resolución de los procesos iniciales de la visa U también debe ser una prioridad, el retraso se debe reducir, y USCIS debe proporcionar el apoyo necesario a la División Humanitaria en el Centro de Servicios de Vermont (VSC) para permitir que esto suceda tan pronto como sea posible.

Gracias por el tiempo y atención a este importante asunto.
